BOOTLEGGERS HARD HIT BY JONES LAW

WASHINGTON, March 16.—(U.P.)—The Jones prohibition penalty law has "knocked the bootlegging fraternity groggy," Prohibition Commissioner Doran told the United Press tonight.
"Reports from every section indicate liquor vendors are laying low and there certainly is a lull in the business at present," he said. "We have them groggy, but the test has not been in effect long enough to determine whether they will recover their wind."
Investigator Added
Doran said the prohibition bureau is employing 350 additional agents and investigators immediately to aid in the general spring clean up of liquor law violators. Money for the extra help was appropriated by congress. With the additional officers, the bureau will have about three thousand field agents and sleuths.
Work on the educational campaign to instruct the public on the benefits of temperance and the evils of intoxicating beverages is progressing he said.
Detroit Secer "Bad"
Except for the Jones law, Doran said, prohibition conditions in the metropolitan centers was "just about the same" with the federal forces striving to plug the sources of supply.
Simultaneously, it was learned conditions in the Detroit sector, where Canadian liquor is smuggled across the boundary, were considered "very bad" by high officials. Canadian liquor imports declared for entry into the United States in January totaled more than 100,000 gallons in addition to the liquor run across the line without the formality of an import declaration.

The "sheik" suspects promised to stay out of the downtown section at night, unless on definite business. They were given a severe reprimand and were freed after finger prints were taken.

Opponents Win In Albany Annexation

ALBANY, March 16.—Opponents to the annexation of Albany to Berkeley won their first step in their fight today when the appellate court handed down a decision upholding the Albany city council in refusing to call an annexation election.
The decision of the court affirms the contention of L. K. Price, city attorney, that the annexation petition was not properly filed by the signers.
The council revised recently to call an annexation election when City Clerk H. W. Brewer reported that of the 1100 names on the election petition, there were not sufficient properly dated signatures to authorize the calling of the election.
George Carter, one of the annexation leaders, on a petition for a writ of mandamus, to compel the council to call an election, carried the fight to the superior court. Superior Judge Homer R. Sprague was appointed as referee to decide if the dates affixed to the signatures were properly signed. He reported that they were not.

DEATH LIST BELIEVED SMALL

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Mar. 16.—(U.P.)—As relief agencies poured forth efforts tonight to succor flood victims of three southern states, the relieving news came that Elba, in the heart of the Alabama inundated area had been practically evacuated. But 200 of the 4000 inhabitants who were trapped by flood waters still remained in the town.
While the fight to save victims had been won in that sector, fears remained that communities on the lower courses of the overflows of rivers were endangered. Rescue parties were enroute to Geneva, Ala., Carville, Fla., and isolated hamlets nearby.
Thousands of the 33,000 estimated as temporarily homeless in Georgia, Alabama and Florida, faced another night in the open, but the general belief and hope was that the death list would remain small.

10 Dead Identified

The identified dead numbered less than ten. Unconfirmed reports were that helms had been swept down flooded streams with persons clinging to the roofs. Storms, caused by threatened to inundate buildings and carry human beings away with the debris.

WOMEN NOT PACIFISTS

Quite frequently we read in the newspapers of the activity of the women in the pacifist organizations, but it must not be taken for granted because of this that the majority of women are pacifists. It may be that few women in America raise their boys for the express purpose of making them soldiers. But at the same time most of them are practical enough to know that if war comes, our boys will have a much better chance if they are properly trained and properly equipped, and that the country will stand a much better chance of coming off with flying colors if we have a real navy to protect us.

Patriotic organizations of women like the Daughters of the American Legion stand for sound Americanism and sound Americanism includes reasonable preparedness for national defense. It is worthy of note in passing therefore, that the Women's National Republican club recently passed, in a New York meeting, a resolution approving the bill before the senate for the consideration of 15 cruisers.

Patriotism is of course not partisan and national defense is not a political matter. The majority of republicans, men and women alike, favor reasonable preparedness and so do the majority of democrats. The resolution of the New York women is therefore not significant from a political standpoint, but goes to show that the American woman is not being deceived by the claims of the pacifists. The resolution follows:

"Whereas, an adequate naval force is essential to the peace prosperity and advancement of the people of the United States and consequently to the well-being of all other nations, now therefore, be it resolved that this meeting endorse the naval construction bill now pending in the United States senate and urge its passage."

The resolution was passed following an address by Rear Admiral Julian L. Latimer, who said in part:

"I believe that a large majority of the citizens of the United States are in favor of adequate national defense, of an effective navy capable of protecting their interests wherever they may lie, but this great majority is inarticulate. It is not aggressive and has no paid propagandists and there is danger that a small and aggressive minority will impose its will upon the large majority of our people, as has happened before in our history, and rob them of the forces necessary to their protection."

Admiral Latimer commended the ratification of the Kellogg pact, but called to task, those who found reason in it for abandoning further naval construction in this country. Other nations which approved the pact, he said, had not abandoned naval construction. Since formally accepting the pact, he said, Great Britain had voted for the building of two 8300-ton cruisers, nine destroyers and six submarines; France had provided for an additional cruiser, six destroyer leaders and six large submarines and Italy had appropriated for two 10,000 ton cruisers, four destroyers and six submarines.

Admiral Latimer in the above paragraph pointed out the real danger to American defense. The sentiment for adequate defense is unorganized and has no central agency of propaganda. But the opposition, though hopelessly in the minority, is well organized and has a well greased, perfectly running propaganda machine. Active minorities have before this out over selfish legislation on the indifferent majority.

Your real international pacifist is quick to criticize America, its defenses and its institutions, but slow to find any faults with Europe. Slow, perhaps is too mild a term, because to the internationalist, Europe is always right and America wrong.

We haven't any advance information as to the content of Mr. Coolidge's possible future literary efforts, but we will wager anything to nothing they won't meet the approval of either Hank Mencken or Sinclair Lewis.

MANY INSPECT OAKLAND PLANT

Thousands of visitors who have gone through the recently opened plant of the Oakland Motor Company, at Pontiac, Mich., have received an accurate conception of the meaning of "precision manufacturing"—a term understood by those who have seen the work of this plant. The plant is a masterpiece of modern engineering, and the work of the plant is a masterpiece of precision.

In this plant, where every building is a masterpiece of modern engineering, the work of the plant is a masterpiece of precision. The plant is a masterpiece of modern engineering, and the work of the plant is a masterpiece of precision.

To achieve this precision, an army of inspectors, each with a microscope, check every operation in the Oakland and Pontiac motor building and car assembly plant, making for this work greater accuracy than that of any other. Everyone of these inspectors is actually subjected to the inspection of the plant, and the work of the plant is a masterpiece of precision.

Inspection of each part received at the unloading docks is done through a device of such accuracy that the result of a fine watch spring, corrected from the slightest deviation in the hardness of the metal tested.

STUDEBAKER ON AIR EVERY SUNDAY

Studebaker has gone on the air. Starting Feb. 3, the first of a series of weekly broadcasts introduced the Studebaker Champions to radio listeners through a coast-to-coast hook up of stations associated with the National Broadcasting chain. They will be heard every Sunday evening from 10:15 to 10:45 eastern standard time.

The Studebaker Champions are a thirty-piece orchestra led by Jean Goldkette, who in the opinion of well-known critics has organized more outstanding dance orchestras than any other leader. Using as a nucleus a smaller orchestra which was led by Paul Whiteman to be one of the best heard on the air, he has assembled in the Studebaker Champions a group of performers whose initial program has already proved their unusual brilliance. The fact that the Studebaker Champions in the twelve members of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra is typical of the character of the entire group.

Jean Goldkette himself is a first-class pianist, having appeared as a soloist with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra in Carnegie Hall, New York. His thorough musical skill is revealed in the modern symphonic arrangements which lend such pleasing originality to his programs.

These new arrangements will be played by the Studebaker Champions in each concert. The program heralds a new era in radio broadcasting because it is the first program of popular music to be heard from coast to coast on Sunday night.

In addition to the full thirty-piece orchestra, the Studebaker Champions' program includes Retting and Boland—the Studebaker piano twins. They are considered one of the most brilliant and unusual piano teams on the air. Beryl Retting is a finished musician. He holds a degree from the famous Bush Conservatory of Music in Chicago, has studied in Europe and for the last six years has been teamed with Mr. Boland in concert work. Clay Boland is a composer-pianist with many successes to his credit. He has written "Nothing to Do but Love," "Dreary Weather," and other popular songs. While a student at the University of Pennsylvania he met Retting and they became fast friends. Since then they have twice toured Europe and have become recognized as one of the best known American piano teams.

The first program disclosed that Fred Waldner, a tenor soloist with a great radio following, is also a member of the Studebaker Champions. His lyric tenor is acknowledged as one of the most pleasing voices on the air.

The modern character of the program, the spirited type of music,

They are in keeping with the brilliant performance and advanced design of Studebaker's champion line of motor cars. With the continuation of these programs one may expect, according to the Cleveland Press, "the finest popular music played in America."

BUICK HEAD LAUDS 1929 CARS, SEES RECORD YEAR

By C. W. CHURCHILL
Salesmanager of the Buick Motor Company

No one attending the recent automobile shows could escape the conviction that the motor cars now being offered to the public are by long odds the finest motor cars ever built. No matter from what angle they are viewed, appearance, performance, or durability—the automobiles for 1929 show a tremendous margin of progress over those of any other year since the industry's inception.

All this is probably only natural, for never has greater attention been focused by manufacturers on the one objective of making motor cars better. The manufacturer has no choice in the matter, for the public has learned to judge automobile values accurately and the demand for real value in return for the public's dollar can not be disregarded.

And progress in greater values was evident on all sides, at the shows. Progress in motor car appearance—in engineering design—and in every other phase of motor car value.

Change Not Progress
A fact which we have long recognized at Buick, and which has guided the whole process of designing and building our cars, is that mere change does not necessarily represent progress. Because this is true, we have adhered consistently to definite principles of chassis design and the valve-in-head principle of engine design, which Buick not only pioneered but developed over 25 years, and to numerous other features long associated with Buick cars.

The tendency to seek the real facts bearing on every situation will be found pervading the industry today. It has spurred the development of such facilities as the famous General Motors Proving Ground, which introduced a new and—at the time of its establishment—higher appreciation of the lengths to which manufacturers should go in preparation of their product. It has accounted very largely for the tremendously increased dollar-value represented by the cars at this year's shows as compared with those of, say, five years ago—an increase really amazing.

Record Year Seen
There is, in many directions, evidence of continued effort toward performance—an item of value which we have always considered paramount, particularly when interpreted to include endurance. The fact that sixes, as evidenced by volume, very nearly monopolize the industry today contains within itself full justification for the assertion that motor car values for 1929 will be far and away greater than ever before, and that six cylinder cars will lead in greater volume than ever before and the recently noted attention to the comfort of driver and passengers has obviously been continued in preparation of virtually all the new cars.

Speaking in the light of careful observation at the shows—as well as with intimate knowledge of the advances embodied in every element of our own 1929 car's value, it is possible to predict for the coming 12 months an era of unprecedented acceptance of motor cars—a period during which their usefulness will attain new peaks, and the service they render become more indispensable than ever.

C. C. Kratzler, the Richmond agent for the Buick cars.

Special Tax Aid To Rural Highways

Special motor vehicle taxes pay but 35 percent of the entire rural highway bills, and are equal to nearly all the cost of main state roads, reports the California State Automobile association.

Driver Goes 16 Miles For 'Special Air'

REEDSBURG, Wis., Feb. 16.—The practical joker has found a new gag in this vicinity. A resident of La Valle, a neighboring village, drove up to one of the garages at that place and wanted special air for the balloon tires on his new automobile.

The attendant, sensing the joke sent the car owner to Reesburg, and in the meantime called one of the Reesburg garages. The La Valle man came for the air and was directed to continue on his way to Baraboo, 16 miles away, where it was thought he could get the right combination.

Many Use Cars On Europe Trip

An increasing number of inquiries from those who plan to tour Europe in their own cars is reported by the foreign travel division of the American Automobile association from all parts of the country. The A. A. A. has arranged to facilitate such travel for the members of its thousand affiliated clubs in the United States. Members of the California State Automobile association have this service at their disposal.

Tammany Hall Head Resigns

NEW YORK, March 16. (U.P.)—The resignation of George Olvany as leader of Tammany hall, presented without warning to the executive committee last night, was New York's big sensation today.

James A. Foley, surrogate, and long one of the powerful influences in Tammany hall, perhaps led the field of successors, but there seemed room for doubt as to whether he would accept.

Olvany gave ill health as the reason for resigning.

Gloves Handy For Machine Driver

The effort and convenience of the modern car has eliminated all such accessories as goggles, linen dusters, and caps, but Louis C. Shaw, general service manager of the National Automobile club, suggests that one keep a pair of cotton gloves handy to protect oneself from dirt during the changing of tires or similar unpleasant occupations.

Ganging Up On All Six

NO ONE appreciates any more than these famous kids of movieland, the advantages of both open and closed cars. This Chevrolet landau has the advantages of both, as it is convertible. In the "open air car" are Jean Darling, Harry Spear, Farina and "Wheeler." The Landau holds Joe Cobb, Mary Ann Jackson and "Pete."

PROGRESS OF CHEVROLET TOLD

DETROIT, March 16.—The first comprehensive answer yet obtained to the question "how did Chevrolet succeed in effecting one of the most mammoth turn-overs in industrial history?" was revealed here today.

Since mid-November when Chevrolet announced that it would discontinue producing four cylinder cars and would produce instead a six in the price range of the four, speculation in automobile circles was rife as to how this was to be accomplished.

Other manufacturers who had attempted turn-overs had required as long as 18 months to two years to swing back into capacity production. There were many skeptics.

When Chevrolet followed up its announcement of a six with the announcement that deliveries on the new models were to begin Jan. 1, few outside the company believed the feat would be accomplished. But deliveries in large numbers did begin Jan. 1. On that date practically every Chevrolet dealer in the country displayed the new six. Once more the question recurred throughout trade circles, "How did they do it?"

4 Years Old
The answer as it now comes to light can be summarized in a single word—"Forethought." The foresighted rollers of General Motors and Chevrolet have never been known to entertain any blind guesses. The Chevrolet Six, which is today speeding over the highways in thousands, was born four years ago.

At that time General Motors began considering with an open mind, whether a six cylinder car could be produced to sell in the price range of the four. Shortly afterward Chevrolet engineers designed the first of the 100 engine, which was to precede the one which today powers the new Chevrolet. One by one these engines were tested, redesigned, improved and torn down. From each experiment the Chevrolet engineer was learning.

Then one day last May after over a million miles of test driving, and four years of the most intensive sort of checking, Chevrolet engineers expressed themselves as satisfied that they had perfected a six cylinder engine of exceptional merit. It was a momentous occasion in the history of the company, and marked the achievement of one of the greatest engineering triumphs in the history of the industry.

24 Plants At Work
Meantime Fisher body engineers working in close cooperation with Chevrolet, announced that they had a body, rugged and attractive, in every way worthy of the sensational new engine. And then it was that the Chevrolet board of strategy expressed themselves as finally satisfied.

Then began the process of making ready 20 widely scattered Chevrolet plants for the advent of the new six. It meant that an entirely new set of machine tools, patterns and dies had to be developed in the shops and on the drafting boards. It meant that Chevrolet's 40,000 employees had to be adapted to the change over.

And all of this had to be done while the company's resources were involved, chiefly at the time with the production of four cylinder gear shift cars in numbers never before equaled in the industry. It is to be remembered that last year Chevrolet's sustained its position as "world's largest builder of automobiles" with a production of 1,200,000 cars.

New Plant Made
Recognizing the fact that new work and first preliminary machine was necessary for the handling of tools and fixtures, the company built an experimental motor plant at Saginaw, Michigan, containing a complete equipment of new machinery purely for research, experiment and establishment of production practice. This plant started last September and continued in operation until Nov. 15.

Meanwhile the Flint Motor plant was shut down from Oct. 1 until Nov. 15, and the task went forward of installing new machinery, retooling old ones for new work and reeducating in precision methods thousands of employees.

On Nov. 15, the machinery used in the experimental motor plant was removed to the main production line and the Saginaw plant was dismantled. Well grounded were all the plans that 12,000 motors were produced between Nov. 15 and Dec. 1, an average of more than 1,000 a day. During Dec. 60,000 motors were produced, an average of more than 2,000 a day.

First Six Day, II
The assembly plants continued operations on the old models until Oct. 25 when the last one closed down to prepare for the new car. The first assembly of the new car started Dec. 11.

Today thousands of the new Chevrolet sixes are moving along the highways of America. Owners have reported that the engine is everything its designers knew it would be. The acceleration is not surpassed by that of any other car on the road. It has responded for any emergency. It has an economy better than 20 miles to the gallon. It is beautiful in appearance. It is exceptionally easy riding.

Engineers and all those who can in detail visualize what a truly tremendous industrial achievement this incredibly fast turn over comprises, marvel at its accomplishment. It stands as a brilliant tribute to two great organizations—General Motors and its Chevrolet division.

New State Road Being Studied

The Kettleman Terminal road, leading almost directly west from Lodi and supplying a short-cut to Isleton, is under consideration as a state highway route to supplant the present alignment by way of Walnut Grove and the south levee of the Sacramento river, is the report received by the National Automobile club. The proposed realignment will supply a direct connection with the existing state highway line between Rio Vista and Suisun.

Oregon Wars On Dogs Riding On Runningboards

The state of Oregon has formed plans for war on the motorist who boasts upon the crutch of a dog as a dog is riding on the running board of an automobile. According to a report from the National Automobile club, over two hundred animals were picked up upon the highways of Oregon, during the year of 1928, which had suffered injury and in many cases death, from falls sustained while riding upon the outside of automobiles. Even though an animal may remain in position for the entire trip, the constant backing against strong winds is unnatural to the breathing capacity of the dog and offers opportunity for great suffering.

That such conditions exist is a point disclosing the negligence upon the part of the motorists to obey the common law of humane treatment.

States Follow California Code

Legislatures in six states are considering adoption of the uniform motor vehicle code proposed for all states and based on California's vehicle act.

These are Illinois, Wisconsin, Tennessee, Missouri, Oklahoma and New Mexico. Pennsylvania has already adopted this code and twenty other states have placed in effect important provisions of traffic regulations as contained in California's model set of laws.

Auto Contest Body Plans Conferences

In an effort to improve conditions under which races are run on the dirt tracks throughout the country, the contest board of the American Automobile association has arranged a series of regional conferences with those interested in such events.

Contest Board Sets New Speed Rules

All automobile speed records from one to ten miles must be bettered by a minimum of two miles per hour under a proposal made by the American Automobile association to the International Sport Committee, which sets the regulations for all international records.

SPEED RECORD SOUGHT BY 2 RACERS

Attempts to lower the world's free-for-all straightaway mile record will be made at Daytona Beach, Florida, between March 1 and 15, according to an announcement received by the California State Automobile association from the contest board of the American Automobile association.

Two cars are entered at present and there may be more later, the Automobile association reports. One of the two entered is the American Triplex, owned by M. White of Philadelphia, which now holds the record of 207,552 miles per hour. The other car is the English Golden Arrow, to be driven by Maj. H. O. D. Segrave, one time holder of the record. White has not announced the driver of his car as yet. Ray Keesh drove it last year when it set the present record.

The American Triplex is powered with three twin-six Liberty motors developing about 1,260 horsepower. Little is known about the English creation, except that it possesses a twelve cylinder Napier Lion aviation motor, similar to the power plant that captured the Schneider cup last year. According to advance information, its makers calculate that it should travel 212 miles per hour when its motor is developing a maximum of 900 horsepower at 3,400 revolutions per minute. It is known to be carefully streamlined and Mayor Segrave has said that it will be equipped with a directional apparatus on top of the hood as an aid to steering a straight course.

Motor Segrave is familiar with the Daytona Beach track, having established a world's record of 203 miles per hour there in a 1,900 horsepower Sunbeam two years ago. That record was shattered last year by General Campbell, a Britisher who at the wheel of a 500 horsepower Bugatti averaged 206 miles per hour. The late Frank Lockart was killed while trying to better that mark. A few days later Keesh in the Triplex set the existing mark. The car has been improved since then, and is believed to be capable of bettering its old record.

VILMA WORKED HARD FOR SUCCESS

Finally starred in her own right in "The Awakening," the Samuel Goldwyn picture which comes to the Fox California theatre today. Vilma Banky, known far and wide in movieland as the Hungarian Rhapsody, can now turn back and look with some pride over the steps of the ascent she has climbed to the top of the screen ladder in the last three years.

Here has been no mushroom burst of stardom, fading as suddenly as it appeared. Thanks to her own good sense and the tactical ability of Samuel Goldwyn, who first brought her to the United States, she can congratulate herself on possessing a firm and sound hold on the movie public.

Practically from the day when she chased Samuel Goldwyn down the platform of the station in her native Budapest to tell him that she would sign his contract after all, she has been in constant danger of getting "star-struck" the strange disease which attacks and sometimes ruins picture actors. Her arrival in New York was a triumph and her first appearance in an American picture, "The Dark Angel" with Ronald Colman, spread her name from end to end of the United States. Any one less astute than Samuel Goldwyn might have started her immediately. But the pioneer independent producer of moving pictures was too canny to take chances.

Miss Banky was immediately borrowed from Goldwyn for no less an honor than the leading feminine role opposite Rudolph Valentino in "The Son of the Sheik" and "The Eagle," thus becoming the envy of every female person in Hollywood. Her return to the Goldwyn of might have been the signal for starting the policy of watching waiting. Miss Banky and Ronald Colman, an ancestral once, were teamed up together for a series of romantic love stories, and soon became as famous as the old combination of Beverly Bayne and Francis X. Bushman.

In "The Awakening," Miss Banky's role presents her in a new mood, fitting enough for her final elevation to the height of a picture career. In previous pictures she has been nearly always a young woman of beauty and charm enough but lacking an opportunity to display the dynamic part of her nature. Marie Ducret, the heroine of "The Awakening," however, is a little Alsatian peasant girl capable of doing whole regiments of cavalry and managing a farm, a household, and a grandfather without taking time off from her day dreams.

Word of the death of her aunt, Mrs. America Adams at Broadhead, Ky., was received here yesterday by Mrs. Jennie Sievers, 1408 Chandler avenue, Mrs. Adams' death occurred just six weeks after the death of her husband, William Adams.

"CONQUEST"

Copyright 1928, Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.
"CONQUEST," starring Monte Blue, is a Warner Bros. pictorialization of this novel.

On an untrodden path, Monte Blue is lost. His friend, a young woman, returns and, after a long search, finds him. She is the only one who can help him. She is the only one who can help him. She is the only one who can help him.

She did not say anything for a while. When she spoke, it was in an awed tone. "How noble of him!" Her father nodded. He was a pillar at the foot of the statue of the hero. He was looking up at her. "He had seen Faunce and arranged for silence. He wants to let the whole thing blow over; he's afraid of injuring you with the scandal."

She seemed to shrink a little, and she was no longer looking steadily at him. "Is that all, papa?" "No, not all. You know they've wanted to take the command of the new expedition from Faunce and give it to Overton."

"Yes, I suppose they will." "They won't, for Overton has refused to accept it. He has asked them to let Faunce keep it. It's a fine thing. It's a noble thing for a man to do. It can mean only one thing!"

She still said nothing, but leaned against the banisters, watching him. "He's in love with you, Diana. There's no other reason on God's earth for a man to do a thing like that, to shield another from the blame that's coming to him by rights. Did you know?" she stopped and looked at her again—"before this that he cared for you?"

"I used to think he did," she answered weakly, her head leaning against the rail. "It's too bad, Diana!" the judge broke out. "It's too bad that you didn't care for him!" His tone, as well as his words, disarmed her. She did not even suspect him of a ruse; but, in her pent-up state, it was too much, and she broke down utterly, quite off her guard.

"Oh, Diana," she sobbed. "I did!" She turned her head and hid her face on her arm, bursting suddenly into wild tears and sobs.

It was a fine distinction, a spiritual difference between the grosser facts of life and the old, sweet memories that were dead. She understood it; she would not forget it, but would her father understand? She knew that he could not. It was the feeling of helplessness, of the faculty of argument, that made her unwilling to face her father again. It was with her, in her mind, in her heart, in her soul, in the ordeal of another breakfast by Lever here brought up to her door, and later it drove her out of doors for a long and solitary walk.

Torn by conflicting emotions, she had stretched out blindly for guidance, at least, for some sort of sympathy that would steady her purpose and point a way in the maze. Then just at the very moment when she was least able to endure it, least able to battle any longer, she saw Overton almost just ahead of her. He was walking fast; as he turned he caught sight of her, and swinging around came rapidly toward her. His face as white as hers was red with embarrassment, and she suspected that he was stopped, more because she did not know what else to do than from any wish to see him. Her first impulse, indeed, had been one of flight, and she suspected that he was stopped, more because she did not know what else to do than from any wish to see him. Her first impulse, indeed, had been one of flight, and she suspected that he was stopped, more because she did not know what else to do than from any wish to see him.

"The note of pain in his voice sent a thrill of answering pain through her heart." "I do—only it's hard—after all I've been told!" "Broken words touched him deeply."

"He should never have told you. I tried to save you that!" he exclaimed. "It was wrong of you to urge silence on him. If he's ever to be anything, he must be silent. A thing like that must be confessed and atoned for. Besides, he knew that I should be sure to find out. I couldn't help it. I've felt that there was something wrong, something terrible behind it all!"

The passion of her tone moved him again, and for a moment he did not reply. "He was keenly aware of his presence at his side. She seemed so young, so girlish, and she was facing a situation so tragic and humiliating! Overton was himself a proud man, and he felt her sudden reaction, felt that he must lighten it."

"I've wanted to speak to you about this," he managed to say at last. "You mustn't think that he did something so unpardonable. It isn't unpardonable, it's simply a fact. He's ever been at the pole. No man has a right to expect too much from his fellows there, and"—he hesitated—"when a man drops behind, why, he's got to perish. The stakes are too great, the price too much, to lose all for one life. I fell in my tracks, and it's only fair to him to think that I should have stayed where I dropped. The expedition couldn't be impeded just like that. It wasn't worth so much of ten would have done in his place."

She stopped and faced him, her large eyes dark with emotion. "Did you leave Rayburn?" "He flushed under her eyes." "That was different. Faunce was with me—there were three of us. Besides, there was no blizzard impending. In a storm, it was made it doubly perilous to stay." "It made the going worse!" she retorted in a hard voice.

He turned his head, and their eyes met; he felt almost as keen a pain as if he, and not Faunce, had done this thing. "He was dead—to her it was unpardonable. She would never see any reason or excuse for it. If she had loved her husband, then Overton's return had wrecked her life."

"I've made you wretched!" he exclaimed with profound emotion. "It's come to me again and again, since my return, that it must be dreadful for a man to come back from the dead. When we die—or people think we're dead—our places close over our graves; there's no niche left for us any more. To come back is to disrupt the tranquility of the life begun to flow in new courses over the surface of the grave. That's what I've done—I've come back and wrecked your happiness!"

She shook her head vehemently, tears rising in her eyes. "No, I never had it. I know now if I imagined. I never had any happiness at all!" "Diane!"

Her cry had gone to his heart. It was more than he could bear. He caught her hands in his and held them.

"Don't say that, for I can't bear it—no man who loved you could bear to hear you say that!" (To be continued.)

DEEDS FILED ON HARBOR TRACT TRANSFER

Deeds Filed

The deeds for the transfer of the 186 lots in the tract were placed on file in Martinez yesterday by the Contra Costa County Title company. The title company, according to Bull, is only acting as a "dummy" until other negotiations can be worked out. Bull declared that the real purchaser would announce his identity as soon as development plans were completed.

The following story which appeared in the RECORD-HERALD on the morning of Feb. 14 gave practically all the data on the deal that is known at present. That this information took an entire month to seep into other columns is a matter for conjecture.

PLANTS SEEN FOR HARBOR TRACT

Reports on another important industrial property deal at the Richmond waterfront was given to the RECORD-HERALD yesterday by an authoritative source which stated that negotiations for the deal are now in progress and that the deal will probably be filled next week.

Although the location of the canneries on the East Shore Park property has not been entirely abandoned, it was said that the property now under consideration might be better suited for this class of industry and that the canneries might be located there.

Keystone Tract

The land known as the Keystone tract is owned by Mrs. J. B. McGilray and is said to have been purchased by Richmond agents close to the Parr Terminal corporation. It is situated in front of the California Cap Co., and is accessible for transportation.

It can be connected directly to the Seaver avenue spur of the Southern Pacific company which is to be constructed with a short time. It is reliably reported that work on this spur will probably be started within the next 90 days.

Long Beach Bids

Henry Ford has called for

Unemployed March On London

DISCOURAGED after months of idleness and poverty, large portions of Britain's 1,400,000 marched to London from Scotland, Wales, and intermediate points. Carrying banners, miners and other unemployed men converged on Trafalgar square where a monster mass meeting was held.

new bids at the Long Beach plant and construction work should start there soon. Previous bids for the plant in the southern part of the state were rejected some time ago. It has always been the announced policy of the automobile manufacturing company that the Long Beach plant would be constructed as the first unit on the Pacific coast. Richmond's plant is to be started soon after, and the company hopes to apply the lessons here which will be learned in the building of the southern assembling plant.

The Keystone tract sale is said to involve 186 lots with consideration of approximately $200 for each lot. The plot contains approximately 1542 acres which will probably be increased with the closing of the streets in that section. The section now divided into lots would be thrown back into acreage under the plan of the new owners and under this arrangement the land now occu-piated by streets would become the property of the lot owners.

Individual Lots

Several individual lots which are scattered about the tract and being sold under contract are now being secured by the new owners of the tract.

This is one of the first moves according to local boosters in which industrial property subdivided into residential lots, will be thrown back into acreage. It is said that a great deal of property near the waterfront will probably go through a similar procedure with the development of the waterfront here.

SUFFERING IN FLOOD AREA ACUTE

NEAR ELBA, A. L., March 16.—(U.P.)—The situation in Elba approached a crisis tonight as 1,500 persons marooned on top of houses and buildings by the swirling floods began to suffer from exposure and the effects of being without food and water for 36 hours.

There were still 45 persons marooned on top of the largest brick building in town. Others were on the second floor of the court house, and the rooms on upper floors of other buildings were crowded with the refugees.

Stranded Severe For Aid

Whenever a boat was sighted, the marooned began screaming and signalling for aid.

Rescue work was being dispatched as quickly as possible with probably twenty boats in active service. However, trouble with motors indicated small likelihood of getting all of the victims to safety in the next few crucial hours.

Four were known to be dead here and fifteen were missing. Some estimated the death list higher.

Fear Insanity

One rescued man said persons marooned in the building he was taken from would go insane in a short time if they were not rescued.

Rescue parties were having considerable difficulty taking the marooned away as they fought each other to get into the boats.

Col. Gavie, in charge of a refugee camp on a small knoll near Elba said the marooned were near the breaking point and immediate evacuation was necessary.

The water was beginning to recede although a strong current continued through the town.

Epidemic Feared

Bodies of animals floating by gave rise to fears of an epidemic. Many of the refugees to day were on top of Bullard Hill at a knoll that rose like an island out of a muddy lake.

There was one hope that the greater part of the remaining flood victims could be removed by night fall. Condition of some of the water-battered buildings was such that it was feared they could not withstand the pressure many more hours.

One report said six babies were born in Elba during the flood.

Colonel Rescued

Col. N. M. Jones of the National Guard was reported rescued from a tree near Elba after clinging to a swinging branch for a night. His boat had capsized. J. A. Connelley, probate judge of Colusa county, of which Elba is the county seat, estimated the damage in the town alone would total $5,000,000. Hardly a house has been left on its foundations. It was said.

Police, Firemen Aid Rescues In Flooded Areas

WATERLOO, La., March 16.—(U.P.)—Police and firemen today were called out to rescue marooned families from the high waters of the Cedar river, which runs through the heart of Waterloo. ## Favorite Music Of Will Rogers To Be Broadcast

The favorite music of Will Rogers, American humorist, will be broadcast over a nation-wide hookup of the National Broadcasting chain stations tomorrow night, according to T. Iversen, local Edison radio dealer.

The program will be heard over KPO and KGO of the bay region between 6:00 and 6:30 o'clock.

When Will Rogers received a letter from Charles Edison, son of the inventor, asking him to list his favorite music to be broadcast by the Edison recording artists, he did three things: First he parked his gun. Second he suspended diplomatic relations with seventeen foreign countries. Third, he answered the letter—and just what he answered will remain a state secret until tomorrow night, when it will be revealed over the air.
